Here are some design details which must be sorted out before much can be implemented:

- which XML tags are used in the sources of the manual pages (Florian knows this)
- what programs are available for transforming the manual page sources into a "readable/displayable" form?
- what relationship is there between the standard CoCoA-5 online manual and the ApCoCoA manual
- is there just a single window for manual entries? Does the window contain just a single entry? Or can several entries be shown (perhaps underneath tabs?)
- should all text from a manual page be copiable, or just examples which are effectively CoCoA-5 code?
